    <h1>Local Community launches a food drive</h1>
    <h2>Event Details</h2>
     The city of Moreno Valley is coming together as a community to open a  food and clothing drive to provide and support families in need. The event will be held at the Moreno Valley Community Center on Saturday, and will begin at 10 AM
     Organizers say that the drive is essential and crucial this year, especially in today's economy, due to the rising cost of housing and groceries. Volunteers will collect the donations of good clothes, hygiene items, and canned food.
    <blockquote>
        "We believe no families in our community should go without supplies and go hungry," said the event coordinator, Juana Palma.
    </blockquote>
    <h2> How to participate</h2>
     Residents can drop off goods and items at the main entrance of the community center. For those who are unable to attend in person, monetary donations can be made through the city's official website. All donations will go directly to the local food bank.
    Every offering makes a difference, no matter the size. As Palma said, <q>One can of beans or a warm jacket could mean the world to a family this winter. </q>
    This event is sponsored by the <cite> Moreno Vallely United Neighborhood</cite> and will feature live music and activities for children to lift the community spirits.
